The Fundamentals of Answers

Genesis 4:3-5

Human beings are those who cannot live without receiving answers from God. All created beings must receive everything from God. We must receive life, air, and every other material thing from Him in order to live. Therefore, receiving answers to our prayers is an absolutely essential condition for us. Without His answers, all mankind would die.
If God were to take away the air, every living creature would die within five minutes. However, God does not take away things He has already given us, such as air. Evil people take advantage of this, but God patiently endures without saying anything until the appointed day He has promised arrives.
However, as God's children, there is nothing more joyful than knowing that God receives our worship and answers our prayers. And when these answers continue, we can live lives like those recorded in the Bible. We, too, can live lives like Joseph, David, Moses, and Paul right now. When we continuously receive God's answers, we can conquer every problem, conquer the world, and easily conquer and have victory over all the works of Satan. If this is the case, there is nothing more important than receiving God's answers.

Today, God accepted Abel and his offering but rejected Cain and his offering. If we understand the reason for this, we can continuously enjoy answers to our prayers. The Bible is a book written to give answers to mankind. Because of original sin, all mankind was destined to go to hell upon death. God gave us the answer to this problem, and that answer is believing in the Lord. We also face countless problems in our physical lives, and the answer to resolving them is prayer and worship. That is why prayer and worship are so important to us, along with faith.

However, there is one essential element that must be included in our prayer and worship. That is the covenant, the blood of the promise. This blood refers to the precious blood of Christ, which crushes the head of the serpent and delivers mankind from curses. Today, Abel brought the firstborn of his flock and offered a sacrifice with its blood. Cain brought crops that had nothing to do with the blood of the promise, and that is why God did not accept his offering. If Cain had also offered a blood sacrifice, confessing the precious blood of Christ as his covenant, God would have accepted his offering as well. This is because God acts according to His promise. Genesis 3:21 says that God made garments of skin for Adam and Eve and clothed them. These garments were made from the skin of an animal after the animal had been killed and a blood sacrifice offered. The blood of this promise points to and explains the precious blood of Christ.

God desires to explain the precious blood of Christ to the world. Only in that blood is there life, freedom from curses, and the authority to break all the works of Satan. That is why the central theme of the Bible is Christ and His blood of the promise. Only through this can mankind come out of the curse of original sin, crush the head of Satan who continues to work even today, gain victory, conquer, and live a life of a masterpiece like those recorded in the Bible. God is looking for such people. He wants to send them to the ends of the earth to proclaim the precious blood of Christ. Therefore, God gives answers to those who hold onto this blood of the promise and pray and worship Him. He desires to relay to the world that this blood of the covenant is the answer to life.
Abel heard this message from his father, Adam, and believed it. Cain, however, rejected it because he was a child of Satan. That is why God rejected Cain.

God does everything according to His promises. God promised the blood of the lamb. To those who pray and worship through this blood of the promise, He gives answers of power and authority, enabling them to conquer curses, overturn the roots of every problem, and live victorious lives. Those who are hearing this message for the first time today may need to see more in depth about the blood of the covenant. However, those who already know this truth simply need to rediscover it today as their covenant. Then their lifelong answer will be revealed. When our eyes are opened and we discover the Word, that Word begins to work within us from that moment on. And its work does not remain only within us; it produces many outward evidences, and we come to see many answers to prayer and proofs. God's principle of doing everything through His Word rightfully applies here as well.

The blood of the promise is the gospel. The precious blood that the Lord shed on the cross crushes the head of Satan and breaks the power of every curse and predetermined fate. Most believers have faith, but they live their lives by relying on their own strength. This is such a sad thing. If that is the case, why did the Lord die on the cross? It is because they do not know the gospel. The only way for us to meet God and enjoy Him eternally is also through the blood of the promise that He shed. Christ is our eternal covenant sacrifice, and without His sacrificial offering on the cross, no one can come out from original sin and the curse of Satan. How can we overcome the countless curses of spiritual problems, mental problems, suicide, and other afflictions? Therefore, there is no gospel apart from the precious blood of Christ.

How, then, do we pray and worship through the blood of the promise? To put it simply, we pray by confessing the Word concerning the three offices of Christ, and hold onto those words of promise and give worship. The three offices of Christ are prophet, priest, and king. The Lord died on the cross for this very purpose. We must hold onto these words as our covenant and continue in prayer and worship. There are many passages in the Bible concerning the three offices of Christ. When we continue to do this, the promises contained in those words will be manifested in our lives. God has promised this. Therefore, all we need to do is put it into practice. If a particular Word has been discovered by me, I must stake my life on that Word. It will always remain in my heart as my covenant. Then my life will surely become as that Word says.

God does everything by His Word. Therefore, for those in whom the Word has entered and become their covenant, the only thing remaining is God's time schedule. The Word entering us means that everything has already been established. The Bible records countless examples of this. That same God is the same today, tomorrow, and forever. His principles and rules never change. I pray that your prayers and worship will be centered on the blood of the promise, held onto as your covenant. In truth, prayer and worship without the blood of this promise are almost in vain. They may not be entirely in vain, but there is a very high possibility that they will amount to very little. They may become nothing more than simply praying with our lips. Beginning today, if we include the blood of this promise in our prayers and worship, everything will be overturned. I bless you all in the name of Christ that this amazing blessing may come upon every one of us.
